

SECTION VII — THE RITUAL OF FIREWALKING (INITIATE’S TEST)

“To walk with fire is to walk with weight.”

This ritual is a 10-day test of character and integration, traditionally undertaken by a Vah’ten as they move toward recognition in their House.

Each day, the initiate chooses one of the Ten Tenets from the Code of Honour and commits to embodying it fully for 24 hours.

They must:

- Speak only in alignment with the tenet.
- Act only in ways that honour the tenet’s spirit.
- Reflect nightly on how they upheld or faltered.

The tenets may be chosen in order, drawn at random, or selected through fire-glyph casting by a Cru’ix.

Daily Reflection Format (evening ritual):

- What did I do today that reflected the tenet?
- Where did I hesitate, break, or succeed?
- How did I feel holding the flame of this principle?

Closing Ceremony (Day 10):

At the end of the tenth day, the initiate burns a parchment with all ten tenet glyphs and speaks the following aloud:

“I walked not to pass, but to transform. What I burned, I carry. What I carry, I serve. I am Levidian.”

This ritual may be overseen by a Cru’ix, witnessed by House members, or completed in solitude.

Some Houses require the House glyph to be carved, inked, or etched upon the initiate at the ritual's conclusion—either physically or symbolically.

To burn each tenet is to forge a soul that holds flame.
