ABOUT THE ICON

Though she began her journey later than most, Quinn Ziwanze — Di’Ursa Ky’Esus — has risen with such undeniable force, vision, and refinement that she now stands as one of the most essential, powerful, and revered figures within the Ent Empire. A leader not born from legacy but forged through relentless determination, she has earned her place not just beside the greats — but among them.

With a rare fusion of creativity, ambition, skill, and discipline, Quinn has transformed from underdog to cornerstone. Her fingerprints are etched into many of the Ent’s most defining reforms, systems, and victories. She is not a supporting piece — she is an architect of success, a force that redirects momentum and solidifies outcomes.

If the Ent Empire is a great machine, then Quinn is one of its central engines — powerful, versatile, and unyielding. She has led critical projects, restructured essential systems, and ensured the Ent’s security, growth, and cultural evolution. Her will is indomitable, her standards non-negotiable. When Quinn moves, the entire system shifts forward.

“She does not simply contribute — she defines outcomes.”

In many ways, Quinn is a primary architect of the modern Ent identity. She helped usher in a new era — one where discipline met elegance, where boldness was balanced by order, and where excellence became the new standard. While others plotted the course and built the buildings, it was Quinn who shaped the roads and carved the pathways — ensuring that the mechanisms of power, security, and energy could move throughout the empire. Her actions didn’t just accelerate progress; they made it possible.

She is both a strategist and a visionary — one who is driven not just to accomplish, but to master. Whether acquiring new knowledge, building new ventures, or leading the charge through adversity, Quinn approaches each challenge with militant precision and unwavering grace. Her leadership is intelligent, instinctive, and deeply intentional.

A woman with long dark hair, wearing a bright blue button-down shirt and dark trousers, stands on a stone balcony. She is holding a small blue handbag and has her left hand resting on the balcony railing. The background shows a city street with cars and trees under a cloudy sky.

Her name is now synonymous with execution. Her legacy is woven into the empire's very fabric. From infrastructure to innovation, from identity to impact — there is no domain untouched by her influence. She is one of the rare few who has immortalised herself in the Ent's operational and cultural DNA.

“A fierce queen, forged in fire and faith,
versatile in her skill, rooted in her power,
and destined for greatness.”

Quinn now stands among the highest ranks of Ent leadership, her importance and authority second only to the Primes themselves. She is no longer simply a part of the narrative — she is one of its authors, and its future depends on her hand.

Core Traits

(MODERN & ASPIRATIONAL)

D'Ursa, Despite joining after the F.O.E Era, through sheer will, ambition, determination and skill, through sheer will, ambition, determination and skill, Di'Ursa has worked her way up to being one of the most powerful levidians to ever exist. She is often used as symbol of “what a member can be when things go right in the Ent” alongside her second generation Co-recruit Veh'Lore the Wolf. She is considered as someone who holds one of the top positions in almost every relevant category in levidian society and is considered to be a pivotal member which allowed the Ent to be what it has become today. She is attributed with being in part responsible for some of the major achievements and reforms that came during Ent Evolution as well as essential to their survival through actions, resourcefulness, acts of service, or victories won on its behalf in almost every period. She is the only levidian with three names Di'Ursa Ky'Esus.

“This is a concrete jungle, and I will never be found lacking. I am my first line of defence, and I will be no one's victim. I strive for the highest version of myself — and when I reach it, I expand it again.”

1 ORIGINS

WHERE JOY GREW WILD

Quinn was born in Chiweshe, Zimbabwe — a village rich in love, rhythm, and resilience. She was raised by her grandmother, a woman of deep spirituality, who taught her to cook over fires, pray with conviction, and sing with soul. Days were filled with mango trees, church hymns, and laughter by the dam; nights with storytelling under stars and Nollywood films at the village chief's house.

“We didn’t have ketchup or fast food. We didn’t need it. We had connection.”

From the beginning, Quinn’s life was filled with both simplicity and depth — elements that continue to shape her essence.

SPARKS OF AMBITION

Even as a child, Quinn’s spirit was unshakeable. When a cousin was praised for counting to 100, Quinn stayed up by candlelight until she could too. Every time she was behind, she worked harder — until she was ahead. From primary school to boarding school, she constantly pushed herself to rise from the back to the top of the class.

When she arrived in the UK as a teenager, Quinn couldn’t use a computer — a basic skill most others had already mastered. But where others had comfort, she had drive. She stayed after hours at school libraries, teaching herself both academic content and digital literacy — twice the work, but never half the effort.

A MOTHER'S LOVE, A WORLD UNKNOWN

Born to a teenage mother, Quinn’s early life was marked by long periods of distance. Her mother’s move to the UK meant Quinn spent her formative years with extended family — a bittersweet necessity.

When Quinn finally joined her in the UK at age 18, she was met with a new land, a new language, and unfamiliar customs. There were no golden streets — only grey skies and quiet struggle. But she pressed forward. She learned. She grew. And she excelled.

“To everything they learned, I had to learn two. But that wouldn’t stop me — it couldn’t.”

BECOMING HER OWN FORCE

Quinn earned her Bachelor of Arts in History from one of the UK's top universities and went on to wear many hats — legal researcher, education officer, flight attendant, project manager, health and social care consultant, and makeup artist. Each role shaped her into a powerhouse of people skills, resilience, and vision.

Professionally, she has been unstoppable. Within her first month in the Ent, she generated over £30,000, solidifying her value instantly. She now leads as the CEO of Nakai Beauty and Brand Owner of Shade, with her presence anchored in both commerce and community.

FINDING THE ENT — FINDING HERSELF

In March 2018, Quinn entered the room she had been invited to many times — this time, she said yes.

There she discovered the Ent Empire — not just an organisation, but a family bound by vision. She found herself surrounded by those who saw her not only for who she was, but for who she could become.

“I found my tribe. I found people who knew how to build. Who dared to dream. Who believed in me until I believed in myself again.”

Within the Ent, she didn't just thrive — she transformed.

The dress features a complex geometric and organic pattern in red, green, blue, and gold. She is looking slightly to her left with a gentle smile. The floor is made of light-colored wood.

HOME IN TWO WORLDS

My name is Quinn Ziwange.

I am a village girl with global dreams.

I was raised in love, forged in fire, and shaped by faith.

I've climbed trees and climbed barriers.

I've eaten from the earth and from the hands of knowledge.

I've known hunger and feasts, silence and song.

I carry my grandmother's prayers and my mother's fight in every step I take.

I may have started in a hut, but I walk now with empires.

I have lived many lives in one lifetime.

And this—this is only the beginning.

THE HEART OF THE BEAR

House Ky'Esus, her Levidian House, represents Well-Being and Connection — two things Quinn exemplifies. She is the Ruby Queen not just in title, but in spirit: precious, radiant, and forged under pressure. Her strength is quiet but undeniable, rooted in discipline, compassion, and grit.

Whether strategising for a business venture or lifting another woman through mentorship, Quinn shows up wholeheartedly and fiercely.

She is an anchor. A rose with iron roots. A leader who blends elegance with edge.

I am strength, I am healing, I am a leader,
I am Love, I am fear, I am respect,
